

Roopville Elementary School Committed to Children

Dear Friend,

As I reflect upon my life, my mind wanders back to numerous thoughts regarding the teachers I have had the opportunity to encounter. I will never forget the day we prepared green eggs and ham in Mrs. Perry's kindergarten class. She taught me how learning can become real when small hands are used to discover. Mr. Thagard instilled a very true principle—we must learn from our history, or we will be doomed to repeat it. In Ms. Wingo's class, I learned to claim learning as my own and to embrace it whole-heartedly. I gained the knowledge of the value of the written word in Mrs. Boozer's literature class. Mrs. Smith taught me that determination with grace would accomplish much. I was shown to take hold of the precepts by which we live because they protect us by Mrs. Dillon. Dr. Little taught me that I am worth something and that it is my duty to invest in others. All of these teachers, and more, have had a profound impact on my life. They have shaped and molded me into the person I am. Each has left an incredible mark upon my heart, and for that, I am truly grateful.

These are the kind of reflections that we desire for the students of Roopville Elementary School. We each have something amazing to share with others. Our team's quest is to illuminate the genuinely important things in life and encourage others to grasp hold of them. We at Roopville Elementary School believe that our children have great value and make the commitment to help them see who they can become.

Respectfully,
Anna Clifton
